Suffication by Gas. Recent cases which have been reported of persons who have been fatally injured by inhaling illuminating gas in their sleeping apartments have revived a question which some time ago excited considerable discussion, but which has considerable discussion, but which has been supposed by many to be settled. It is simply whether the excess of carbonic oxide contained in "water gas," so called, over that contained in ordinary gas made from blummous coal is of importance as a factor of danger in the cases alluded to. In other words, while it is asserted on the one band that either kind is prospans, it is hand that either kind is poisonous, it is claimed on the other resuscitation is far more difficult and doubtful if the gas inhaled is made of steam, naphtha and anthracite coal than it is if it is the old-

Another question of interest lately agitated is how people manage to have gas turned on in their rooms without knowing it. Formerly it was that in such cases the riction had blown out the light before ing it. Formerly it was that in such cases the victim had blown out the light before going to sleep, and the phrase, "blow out the gas," became the foundation on which cheap wits were won't to construct ghastly attempts at humor which passed current for jokes. There are, however, certain reasons for supposing that people do not often blow out the light and then he down and suffocate in the gas. In the first place it recourses a tolerably strong muscular. sunocate in the gas in the first place it requires a tolerably strong museular effort to blow out a gaslight if the gas is turned on to make an ordinary light, and any ordinary person who should undertake to "douse the glim" in that way would be apt to be discouraged before accomplishing the feet and try fore accomplishing the feat and try some other way. In the next place, if the light were successfully blown out the one who had done it would be likely to learn that something was wrong unless he went to sleep immediately, and under ordinary circumstances would cast about to discover what the

These two questions, both interesting and of importance to almost everybody, have been called up by the fact that several deaths have occurred within a short time from the cluse described. In all the cases it is hardly to be supposed that the gaslight was blown out by the unfortunate persons who died, and it becomes interesting to know what the probable cause of the accidents was.

The reporter talked with two veteran that the property such of whom began by hotel managers, each of whom began by declaring that nothing of the kind ever happened in his house. Both had the same theory of the cause of the trouble, however, which can therefore be told in the language of one. He said "I don't think neonle blow out the gashoht. It the language of one lie said "too to think people blow out the gashght It is more likely that they turn it off, and then, to make sure that the gas is really and entirely shut off, they tumble with the fixture and turn the thumbpiece half way around again, so that they turn it on after they have turned it off. Of course they do not see the light again, and being satisfied from that fact that the gas is really turned off they go to bed. Then, if they are very tired or very good sleepers, they drop off before they notice the trouble. If they he wate long anough they find out what awake long enough they find out what the matter is and remedy it."

"But," asked the reporter, "is it not "But," asked the reporter, "is to not the fact that in hotels the pressure of gas is commonly reduced about midnight? And is it not possible that the gas might be partly turned off by the occup int of the room and then, the pressure being reduced, might not that put the light out? And then, when the pressure is again put on, might not the gas come in sufficient volume to sufformer on the control of the contr gas come in sufficient volume to suffocate a sound sleeper without awakening tion, and if it was turned very low there wouldn't be enough gas escaping after the pressure was increased again to prove fatal, or even serious, unless the prove fatal, or even serious, liniess the room was a very close one and the man slept very long. Not the probability is that the persons who die in this way either do not know how to turn the gas off and on or else they turn it on acci-dentally after turning it off?

In respect to the comparative danger from the two different kinds of gas, it

Breas Baking in London.

DECATUR, ILLINOIS, THURSDAY, OCTOBER 5, 1882.

A London bakehouse is almost invariably situated in a cellar. Generally it is a cellar that might do well enough for the reception of lumber, but is utterly a cellar that might do well enough for the reception of lumber, but is utterly unfit for any other purpose, and, of all purposes to which it might possibly be put, for the manufacture of bread. The writer spent a night in such a place a short time ago. The walls were bulging, cobwebby and old, the overs were under the pavement of the street, the refuse of the bakehouse was deposited near the ovens, the four or five com-partments into which the cellar was partments into which the cellar was divided were small and close, and when the gas was lighted at midnight cock roaches were swarming over walls and callings, chasing each other about the sacks of flour, and holding assemblies in the bins. This, however, was rather a superior bakehouse. The duty and dismal caverns in which most of our head a mode are inscreasible. If the bread is made are inaccessible—if the baker does not regard cleanliness as a moral obligation, he is, at any late, fully aware that the cellais in which he practices his mystery are not quite such show places as they ought to be. The circumstance that they are underground, and that the ovens are so placed as to draw the air which feeds them—often from the close proximity of the druns from the close proximity of the druns-over the thoughs in which the dough is kneaded, is in itself sufficiently appall-ing. Bread readily absorbs the su that surrounds it, and ought never to be made or to be kept in confined places. In London, however, it is habitually made in dens so confined and nauseous that the baker's trade is one of the most unhealthy in existence.

The condition of the bakehouses in one of the least evils connected with the existing system of bread-making Bread is made now after much the same fashion as was in vogue, probably, in the Cines of the Plan The boker still uses his naked arms in the process of uses his naked arms in the plocess of kneading The "sponge" is laid in long wooden troughs. Over these the journeyman baker, often working in a temperature of ninety degrees, bends for half an hour or so while he kneads the dough. Of course he per-pires. His occupation is as laborious almost as that of the blacksmith, and produces similar outward effects. However much he may be disposed to cleanliness, he can not pursue his occupation except under pursue his occupation except under conditions that to any one not accustomed to the process are sckening to behold Atter belaboring the dough much as a housewife belabors a teather bed, he "jubs his arms out"—that is, he clears them of the paste with which they are encrusted by dipping his hands in dry flour and jubbing them down his arms. The dough comes off in little rolls, which are returned to the trough ane kneaded in with the bread. This is not the case only in bakehouses which are doing a "cutting" business. It is the process common in all bakehouses. The dough which adheres to the arms, saturated as it must be with impurity, would otherwise be so much waste, and in a bakehouse nothing is wasted on a cakenouse nothing is wasted

Such things are not pleasant to dwell upon; but bread is the chief food of the people, and it is as well that we should know how it is manufactured
Before being made up into loaves and put in the oven it goes through a tiresome amount of handling. After boing kneaded in the troughs it is pulled out in pieces and rolled vigorously on a bench. Now and then a knife is taken up and the bench is scraped, and the scrapings are returned to the trough The old proverb about exting a peck of durt has a more literal application than is generally supposed. We take agreat deal of our allowance in our bread. It is a remarkable fact that there is more "No," was the reply "Such a case would not be likely to occur. The piessure is commonly reduced at eleven or twelve o'clock, it is true, but unless a light was turned very low indeed it would not be put out by such a reduction, and if it was turned very low there at work for a few hours there would be a general and immediate resort to homemade bread .- Pall Mall Gazette

Can any Republican give any halfway respectable excuse for voting for Democrats for county offices in preference to the regular Republican

THE Republican county ticket is one of the very best ever presented to the voters of Macon county; there is not a man on it who is not in every way worthy the support and confidence of the people.

Tar Republicans of the first district yesterday nominated Ransom W. Dunham, President of the Chicago Board of Trade, as their candidate for Congress. Mr. Dunham is about 44 years of age, is a life-long active and prominent business men

WILLIAM C. BIACK, a brother of Gen. J. C. Black of Danville, was yesterday nominated for Congress by the Democrats of the third district Chicago's west side. The Chicago dournal of yesterday, in speaking of the Black brothers, makes the mistake of saying that "both were Republicans up to the time of Gen. Grant's second nomination." Gen. J. C. Black did not wait for the Greeley movement to take him into year in this (the old seventh) district, against H. P. H. Bromwell, by whom he was besten. He has ever since been training with the party to which belongs the men who came so near shooting his young life out while he was gallantly fighting that have produced 2,000 gallons of against the majority of his present associates, to preserve the nation they were trying to destroy.

The fact that every candidate on the Republican ticket is capable and worthy, and entitled to the confidence and support of every member of the party, will only serve to make the Democratic candidates and their friends work so much the harder to secure the necessary votes from among the more easily persuaded Republicans. It is time that the majority in Macon county should assert itself, and so act as to keep the local offices out of benefit of the Democratic party when a general election comes round.

According to the report of the state board of Agriculture the total yield of the winter wheat crop of the state for 1882 is nearly 51,000,000 bushels, or in exact figures, 50,951,-529 bushels. The average per acre is 18½ bushels. In quality the crop returns in money to the farmers will be greater than of any crop harvested during the past fourteen years. Two counties, Madison and St. Clair, yield over 2,000,000 bushels each, the exact figures being 2,421,921, and 2,-592,520 bushels respectively. Thirteen counties yield over 1,000,000 Imshels each, as follows: Adams, 1,-209,060; Edgar, 1,007,136; Greene, the other day: 1,055,082; Jefferson,1,023,000; Mon roe, 1,791,909; Montgomery, 1,492, 326; Pike, 1,548,780; Randolph, 1,-964,930; Vermilion, 1,037,196; Washof cats is stated at 99,275,380—nearly 100,000,000 bushels, showing an average of forty bushels to the acre, and exceeding by considerably over ever before raised in the state. Not A Friend of Labor.

There can be nothing plainer than that the Democratic party is not the friend of the poor man or of the laborer. It kept the homestead act power by the suffrage of a free people it claimed ownership to the blood and toil of half the labor of the country by a title founded on robbery; and to-day it is attempting to foist free trade on the people, so that the laboring men will be forced to an equality with the pauper labor of What do laboring men think of living on ten cents a day? Yet it is claimed that it is done in this very county by men who were brought up to it in Europe, where they were ground down so as to live on next to nothing.

Take away the tariff and every the hands of the minority, who do manufacturer will have to compete ing such paitry wages. The result would be closed as they have been the workingmen in these establishture. Do our farmers want this whole nation to be surrendered up to agriculture, with a market across the ocean three thousand miles away? Do farm Lands want to go back to $8 and $10 a month,-the wages has never been surpassed, and the that were paid under free trade. If not, they will look into this question. | yesterday show the state has given There is no surer saying than that Democracy is the foe of the laborer and the poor man.

"Free Whisky."

Here is a sample of democratic which the following is a part, was made by Hon. E. B. Estelton at the democratic convention at Akron, O.,

In 1851 there were the beet and brick up the hole for a but two of these companies in Ontario. The assets of eighty of the companies which report the item amount to nearly $70,000,000. Nine years ago the assets of the twentythree companies then in existence were less than $11,000,000. The companies are authorized to receive money on debentures, and the amount thus held exceeds the deposits by more than 50 per cent, the debentures fund being $21,913,828. The rate paid for deposits is lower than for debentures, but the debentures have the advantage of being payable at fixed dates. MRS. GEN. LEW WALLACE, who has been permitted to see the inside of a Turkish harem recently, was met at the iron gate entrance to the grounds by two very black, and very homely sunuchs. These conducted her about, and at last to a large room hung with fine eastern draperies. Here reposed the proprietor's favorite, for the time being; Mrs. Wallace thus describes his person in the New York Independent: "Among the billowy cush ons and vaporous veilings rose the young face. Oh! what a revelation of beauty, uplifted in a curious, quostioning way to see what manner of women these are who come from the ends of the earth with unveiled faces. and go about the world alone, and have to think for themselves poor things! The expression was that of a lovely child waking from summer slumber in the happiest humor, ready fair as the first of women while the angel was yet unfallen. A perfect eval, the lips a scarlet thread, and oh! those wonderful Asiatic eyes! lustrous, coal black, long rather than round, beaming under joined eyebrows.'

We have intercepted on the way to our agricultural editor the following account of the wonders of vegetable growth in Dakota. The letter is dated Continental hotel, Fargo, D. cistern. Seriously, this is certainly a wonderful country. You can raise nearly everything here that you can in Ohio, excepting corn and pumpkins. The seasons are too short for corn. Pumpkins could be raised here, but the vines grow so fast that they wear the pumpkin out dragging it around over the prairie.

> Kissed for Bishop Foster. Saratoga Letter to the N. Y. Sun.

Ex-Senator L. Sessions landed at Congress hall to-night. He has shaved off his famous milk-white goatee, and most of his old friends had to be introduced to him. "You see," he said, "I went down to camp-meeting the other day, and, before I knew it, one of the sisters kissed me for Bishop Foster. I didn't want to take unfair advantage of the bishop, and so, to avoid even the appearance of evil, I concluded to disguise myself."

it, as follows:

The religious culture of the human family, inteligently considered, is the most comprehensive work of which we can conceive. The creater has evalted us to be co-workers with himself in accomplishing our restoration from darkness to light, from sin to holiness. What then shall we say of childhood culture? Are not the personal responsibilities of childhood culture greater than the cultivation of the mind at any other period? Childhood is the scason of impressibility and activity, when everything with which welcome in contact lays a moulding land upon our destiny and leaves an impress upon our character. It is a law of nature that in its formative period it is like wax to receive, and in its maturity like marbie to retain.

MR. A. L. PETSER, of Whitmore township, has returned home from a visit to John C. Ruddock, Sr. and others in Iron county, Missouri. He brought with him samples of Mr. Ruddock's corn, which demonstrate that good corn can be produced in our sister state, though it is not county. Mr. Pelser thought he would take a look through southeastern Misson-ii and view the country, but he comes home satisfied that old Macon beats them all for big crops.

There are now 110 different lodges of this the Decatur Review, but he had not been order in Illinois, the one born at Maroa doing any work of late except to tinker last night being the 18th formed thus far at little engraving jobs for David Martin and others in his room. He was a man more or less addicted to the use of intoxicating liquor, and last night he was under the influence of it. Mr. Russell went to the room at a late hour, feeling unwell. He found Wickersham there, moving about in his corner, where he had a shake-down bed on the floor. He desired Russell to take some opium, of which he himself had taken a portion, but Russell refused to take it, and was soon Wickersham had prepared the liquid dose, and Russell says his room mate had not gone to bed when he went tolsleep. Before dropping asleep Russell asked Wickersham if he would go to the hardware store this morning and tell the proprietors that he wouldn't come to work until to-day noon. Along about 3 and wood promptly attended to. [4-dlw o'clock this morning Russell was awakened by the groans and snoring of Wickersham, but he paid little attention to him, as he had often made such noises before. Russell awoke again at 9 o'clock and noticed Wickersham, as he supposed, still asleep in his corner. On awakening again at 11:45 o'clock, Russell found Wickersham cold and dead, with all of his clothes off, except his shirt, and his right hand lying upon his left breast. In this condition the body was found by a reporter and Coroner Dinneen this noon. Mr. Russell states that Wickersham, who was aged about 50 years, and who was a nephew of Col. D. Wickersham, of Springfield, had seemed in a despondent frame of mind for some time, and had said that he intended to leave Decatur soon. The general belief is that the printer took the opium with suicidal intent. He was a man well known in different parts of the state, particularly in Springfield. He and his wife had parted and it is supposed that this may be one of the reasons that caused the man to destroy his life. THE VERDICT of the jury at the inquest was that Milton Wickersham came to his death by the use of opium taken by himself while under the influence of liquor. The jurymen were Dr. J. D. Wheeler, J. J. H. Young, Sr., Peter Perl, G. G. Holmes, J. R. Blain and James Babcock. Col. Wickersham has been informed by telegraph of the death of his nephew. The answer received by Mr. Jack was that the deceased be buried here, and that all necessary expenses would be paid.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS AT MAROA

New Lodge Instituted by Grand Master Roper-The Officers-A Banquet.

The fact that a new Lodge of Knights of Pythias was organized at Maroa last in Decatur for a number of weeks, have night was the cause of much lively intereen occupying a third story room in the est among the members of the order in this year in this state. The order is one of the most worthy institutions in existence. It teaches and upholds everything that is good as between man and man, and exacts a full recognition of the Christian religiou. It cares for the sick. helps the needy and unfortunate brothers and has a beneficiary fund, and includes in its membership everywhere many of the most reputable citizens of the country. The lodge at Maroa was formed mainly through the special efforts of Dr. J. B. C. Phillips, a resident of the town, assisted by members of No. 17 of Decatur, and the new sister lodge is named "Royal Lodge, No. 109, Knights of Pythias." The officers are: Past Chancellor, W. F. Bridgman; Chancellor Commander, Thomas Hartman; M. of F., D. G. Waggoner; K. of R. & S., E. Friedman: M. at A., S. H. Swain; I. G., W. H. Stoutenborough; O. G., W. J. Applegate. The conferring of the three degrees upon the 21 members of the new lodge was conducted by Grand Chancellor Joseph D. Roper of Springfield in Cadets Armory, and after the officers above named had been installed, the visiting knights were tendered a grand banquet by the Royal Knights. It was served in Schenck's restaurant, and was a feast that was generously praised. The banquet was discussed at one o'clock this LODGES REPRESENTED.

There were eight lodges represented at the installation as follows: Cœur de Leon Lodge, No. 17, of Decatur, 30 members. Our Sir Knights wore their new and handsome parade uniforms and swords for the first time. They turned out strong and made a fine appearance as they marched to the depot. The ommanding officer was Henry McClellan. Capital Lodge, No. 14, of Springfield, the national hymn of France, possesses thrilling interest. To be brief, it was at Strasbourg, in the last week of April, 1792, that, news of the Austrian declaration of war having been received, the Mayor, M. Frederick de Dietrich, invited one of the numerous guests at his table, Rouget de l'Isle, an officer of engineers, aged thirty-two, to compose a war song for the soldiers about to set out to meet the enemy. The words and music were written during the night. and the song was given to an enthusiastic audience next day by M. Dietrich's niece. The piece was given to bandmasters of the several regiments in garmasters of the several regiments. masters of the several regiments in carrison, and performed in public Sunday, April 29, at the parade on the Place d'Armees. The words and music were printed immediately on a half-sheet quarto by Th. de Dannebach, printer at Strasbourg—a publication which availed Rouget de l'Isle when subsequently his claim of authorship was contested. The claim of authorship was contested. The song was popular; by the 29th of June it had appeared in the Journal des Departments Meridionaur. It spread to Montpellier, and then to Marseilles, where a copy of the "Chant de guerre de l'armee du Rhin"—to give it its original title—was given to each of the famous band of Marseilles, "who knew how to die." They brought the song to Paris July 30, 1792, where it took the name it has ever since retained. In his book, published in 1796, Rouset de l'Isle calls it "Le chant des combats, vulgarement "l'hymne des Marseilles," and dedicates it "to the manes of Sylvain Bailey, first Mayor of Paris." The original version was addressed to Marseilley, and was elected by an alclaim of authorship was contested. The song was popular; by the 29th of June vani Daney, first Mayor of Paris. I ne original version was addressed to Marshal Luckner, and a copy was sent to Gretry at Paris, as the musician records in his "Memours." It was a particularly unlucky song, for, apart from the author's own troubles, his mother died of grief, attributing the horrors of the Reign of Terror to her son's verse, and Mayor Deitrich and Marshal Luckner were guillotined.

The "Marseillaise" was first identified with the events of the 10th of Au-ned with the events of the form of August; at the feast in imitation of those ordered by Lycnigus, October 14, 1792, the seventh stanzi was sung by a chorus of children. This additional verse was long attributed to Marie-Joseph Chenier, but in 1848 a poet, Louis du Bois, put in his claim to the author-Bois, put in his claim to the authorship—a claim that long received, but was utterly unfounded. The seventh verse was written by a young priest. Antoine Pessonneaux, professor of rhetoric at the College of Vienne (Isere). Vienne was celebrating the feast of the march to Paris, and the Professor wrote the verse for his pupils, who saug it with immense effect as a farewell to the Marsoillait next morning. Lucky for Pessonneaux that he wrote it, for some months after he was hauled before the revolutionary tribunal at Lyons, where trials lasted but a minute or so where trials lasted but a minute or so and sentence was pronounced in silence. Pessonneaux's patriotism was admitted, but he was a priest. "Who are you?" asked the Judge. "The Abbe Pessonneaux, author of the last verse of 'La Marseillai-e.'" The Judge laid his open hand upon the black cloth, guards, jailers and citizens made way respectfully, and the abbe passed out, free to go where he would. He died in a little parish in Duerphiny, March 9, 18J5.—
